

Privacy Policy - Website

If you are a member of the public and decide to access ACCM (UK)'s website, please be assured that we do not capture and/or store any personal information about you but merely log your internet enabler's IP address because this is automatically recognised by ACCM (UK)'s web server. IP addresses are not linked to any personal data, so unless you are formally contacting us by email or completing an on-line form you will retain your anonymity.

When you email us or complete one of our on-line forms we will record your email address and any other information you provide voluntarily to us. Your data is treated confidentially and kept safe in an electronic file which is password protected and will be used only for the purpose or purposes for which you have provided it. Furthermore, unless ACCM (UK) are required to disclose it by law or are permitted to do so, your data will not be passed to any third parties for any other purposes unless you have indicated or have previously indicated that you have no objection to us doing so. However, please be aware that if you post offensive, inappropriate or objectionable content information on ACCM (UK)'s website we may use your personal information to stop such behaviour continuing. If we reasonably believe that you are or may be in breach of the law, we may use your personal information to inform relevant third parties about your behaviour and the content you have posted. If you are 16 or under you will need to get your parent's or guardian's consent before providing personal information to us.

Any personal information you provide will be retained by ACCM (UK) only for as long as it is reasonably necessary for the relevant purpose for which you provided it or for as long as is necessary and reasonable in the circumstances and also to enable ACCM (UK) fulfil any statutory or regulatory requirements.

Unfortunately, the transmission of information via the internet is not completely secure. Although we will do our best to protect your personal data, we cannot guarantee the security of any data transmitted to the Site; and any such transmission is at your own risk. Once we have received your information, we will use strict procedures and security features to try to prevent unauthorised access.

ACCM (UK) website contains links to other sites. We are not responsible for the privacy practices of such other sites. This privacy policy applies solely to information collected by this website.

Please see below ACCM (UK) policy on cookies.

This statement may be updated from time to time.

Cookies

A cookie is a small data file that some websites send to the hard drive of your computer every time you visit them. The file often contains a unique identifier and can contain information such as your internet provider's IP address. These websites store the sites and the pages you have visited and may track the patterns you adopt when accessing such sites. However, these cookies can only contain personal information which you have provided about yourself. You can adjust your computer to accept all or some or alternatively, not to accept any cookies at all. However, by disabling or even partially disabling cookies you may restrict or even preclude being able to contact and assist you in certain circumstances.

ACCM (UK) website does not employ cookies or web bugs on any page of this website.